

Unique Assets for Non-Profits

Published on Apr 25, 2023 by Blake Singleton

Your organization received a large gift of minerals, now what do you do? The first thing your organization needs to do is understand what the gift is and whether your organization allows for the acceptance of these types of gifts. There are many types of oil, gas, and mineral gifts that can be donated, some are great assets for generating continuous revenue and then there are some that can be detrimental. Making sure you understand the gift is very crucial and it is always necessary to make sure these assets are being prudently managed.

At Peoples Company Energy Management, we help many not-for-profit organizations manage their gifts of oil, gas, and minerals. If your organization is willing and able to accept these types of gifts, Peoples Company has the staff, expertise, and technology for full-scale management of these gifts. Our goal for the client is to alleviate any headaches or concerns that your organization may have by providing management to process revenue; negotiate oil and gas leases; and verifying that you are getting paid on all your assets, just to name a few. If this is something that you feel your organization would benefit from, please reach out to Peoples Company Energy Management about partnering with your organization to maximize and grow your portfolio of unique assets. Peoples Company can help add tremendous value to your organization and can help expand the works and services that your organization does by growing revenue on your unique assets.

We can also assist with liquidation of assets when organizations either have an acceptance policy that prohibits them from accepting these types of gifts, or when an organization needs cash for a project. We make sure that our client's assets are seen by a vetted list of notable buyers and can provide direct sales or live auction opportunities to help offload the assets. We know the importance of unique assets and want to help every organization truly understand their portfolio so they can leverage their assets to further the missions and the message of the organization.

If your organization has oil, gas, or mineral assets, please feel free to reach out to the Peoples Company Energy Management team for a full analysis of your organization's portfolio of assets. To learn more about our services, or if you are just interested in learning more about the energy industry, please feel free to reach out to us.
